Testimony of Scott Heaton

On January 31, 2009, The youth put on a program called "Spill." The program put students into groups with leaders in the youth room, and then the groups would pray to see where God was leading us. I (Scott Heaton) was grouped with Katie Campbell (High School Student) and Katie Bell (Junior High Student). Both of the girls felt like we should go to Starbucks on Davis close to North Tarrant. So we loaded up in the car and drove there. After briefly praying for the baristas behind the counter we came outside and found a high school couple (boy and girl) that were smoking a hookah. I walked up to them and asked them if they needed prayer for anything. The reply from the boy was, "You mean like, God?" After saying yes he shook his head and said he was an atheist. So I asked him why he was an atheist. He told me he grew up in church and forced to read the bible and go to Sunday school and none of it was his choice, but once he got out of his parents control he started looking up scientific information and "other" things that prove Christianity and the bible is wrong. Knowing that even my youth students could logically disprove his arguments I said, "Well I'd rather just show you God exists. What do you need healing for?" He then told me he had a lump close to his armpit. I asked him if I could lay hands on his lump which he hesitantly agreed to. So both of the girls and I laid hands and prayed. After we removed our hands I asked if it was there still. "It's smaller!" He said. So I reached back around and felt the lump and I couldn't feel it all. It was about penny sized and was certainly gone or significantly smaller! I told him that it was Jesus who had healed him. To say the least he was stunned and made a comment that he "had a lot to think about."
